

Eastern Long-necked Turtle

Species Name: Chelodina longicollis

Wadawurrung Name: Barrabin

Fun Fact: This turtle is named after its long neck, which is usually about half the length of its carapace (shell). It has webbed feet used for swimming and digging and when it feels threatened, they can eject a stinky liquid from their 'armpits' and groin.

The plants featured here are Cumbungee and Common Reed, often found near fresh water and an important plant for Eastern Long-necked Turtle habitat.
